

Thank you

After a really difficult 12 months, we didn't know quite what to expect this Red Nose Day. Having a laugh in a global pandemic is a big ask, I admit.

But my goodness, you certainly showed us.

Schools have always been at the heart of Red Nose Day. Your boundless energy and imagination make the big day what it is and inspire so many people to take part.

But the enthusiasm and effort this year – less than two weeks after welcoming all of your pupils back – was truly extraordinary.

Whether you got sponsored for a challenge, collected donations, shared a smile or simply switched on the telly, thank you. Your laughter and positivity brought some much-needed brightness to the world.

In a year when everything changed, people already living the toughest lives were hit particularly hard by the pandemic. Many more have been unexpectedly pushed to the brink.

The money raised for Red Nose Day will help some of the most vulnerable people in society find safety and support – and turn their lives around.

We're so grateful that you joined us in this funny old year, and hope you had some very well-deserved fun.

With love and thanks,

Sir Lenny Henry
